Collaborating for Project Efficiencies

In 2014 Sir Ian Wood stated that for the UKCS to remain globally competitive operators and contractors in the basin needed to collaborate more. Since then the Engineering Construction Industry Training Board (ECITB) have been supporting the behavioral change required to create collaborative environments. Andy Brown, Director Operations for the ECITB will brief the delegates on the industry working together to define collaboration, what it means, how it could be encouraged and the development of the ECITB Project Collaboration Toolkit. He will bring to life the use of the Toolkit through existing case studies.

Agenda

- 1800 – Networking and light refreshments
- 1830 – Andy Brown Presentation
- 1920 – Q&A
- 1930 – Networking
- 2000 – Formal Close

A free copy of the Project Collaboration Toolkit (PCT) will be available for attendees.

Main Speaker: Andy Brown

Andy has been in the engineering sector since 1982, initially as a producer, then team leader. Andy moved to developing engineering training solutions for business and in 2000 Andy delivered leadership training. Here he led training and development activities; gaining experience in designing bespoke training solutions and evaluating business operations. In 2006, Andy joined the Engineering Construction Industry Training Board, working as a product development project manager, within 14 months started to run the development function. In 2011 Andy took over the UK operations for the business and is now responsible for the delivery of over £20M of products and services to over 300 companies.
